The Black Afrikan King David Solomonic Bloodlines in the Western Diaspora By Yolande Grant

A necessary sovereign Queendom, passed on as a bloodline privilege. And strategically conceived during mass global upheavals. To fill a vacuum created by corrupt regional elements in the political arena. A concept of detailing the precise information flow of our hidden Afrikan history. An administrative center and hub to counteract the unceasing, increasingly disingenuous, unusable famously disruptive rhetoric leaking from poisonous politicians and their hangerson. While armed with a chestful of unwavering ulterior motives; as enemies of the people for the last 100 years. We have a right to defend ourselves against such dangerous Judases and their reverse slave trade ambitions with historical slavers. While stuck in a highly predictable and codified world on replay, famously known as same old. Agitated countries on the international front are mobilizing to issue in more active war zones. Amidst threats of a revamped enslavement process by the millennia-old previously unknown occupying slaver players. Who are now desperate to achieve world control.

Archival slavers, just like their paid beastly Caribbean weapons and counter-parts. Who are determined to enslave Afrikans. A world benefitted for far too long from human ownership, as traders on our continent. Although they have no bloodline connection to our ancestral areas as Asiatics and not Afrikans. The practice never ended, still in vogue, and as revealed, not above kidnapping women during war as "spoils." This was emotionally alluded to in a recent video by one of their war scholars. Even after invading and separating us from Afrika. While destroying our civilizations for upward of two millennia. They scattered the most important bloodlines across the earth, and stole our highly relevant data. But still do not know how to use any of it, even after all this time. Attempted to permanently hijack our ancestor's creations, and ancient advancements, ran a brutal millennia old subsaharan slave trade on our ancestral lands against us, occupied our resources packed desert lands for multiple millennia to this day and hid it from the world. Willingly helped by the eager and lowest forms of life - political puppets, and minions. Many of us can now reclaim original identities as sovereign ascendants of the immemorial Afrikan King David Solomonic Dynasty. Information passed down through the ages and confirmed via genetic tests. This includes members from the branches of the oldest "ancestor" or "Eve" family trees of the Khoisan and the Twa. We will witness the race to the end. An unmatched celestial ancestry desired through millennia by global and local impostors. And generations of identity thieves. The slick talking, read: lying, prophets and messiahs. Genocidal maniacs now trapped in religious delirium.

A mentally deranged group who strangely misidentify; while trying to assume and usurp our ancestral distinctiveness until outed online by genetic testing. The deluded perpetrated a shell game on the world's people. To deny us our Afrikan heritage, but missed a crucial detail. They do not possess the requisite sacred pedigree of invisible naturalness of the Kushite Kingdom. A blessed gift. This was reserved only for holders of the manifestly powerful Black-Only lineage. To ongoing horror. Occupiers took the wrong area of Afrika. It is no "holy land." As illogically repeated in their fairy tale: given the demographics and seven millennia or more of occupation and invasion on blood-drenched, eternally cursed lands as seen, predicted and installed by our highly melanated forebears. Our lands have become their burial sites at their own hands. Interlopers near and far wasted decades on obscuring intent. With a fraudulent 'chosen people' masquerade, as converts. Now exposed everywhere and punished with international mirth. Claimants who have absolutely no bloodline connection to the Solomonic Kush regions, recently discovered after DNA testing, as converted Judaic Europeans. The people were shamelessly misled for decades. While the drums of war make it all somber.

The Anonymous Blog

The public shaming of two regressive fake scholars and pretend theological historians on the bajan Underground Blog, is a blessing. This was after the most vicious lies told against Afrikan ancestry for the last 17 years by dangerous rote learners. Enablers went completely quiet on the Israel/Palestine issue. It has since been proven beyond a doubt by DNA testing shown online. That the giddy religious psychopaths were misleading everyone because of their anti-Afrikan biases surrounding our classical biblically referenced ancestry. Previously both black men with their ill-informed sidekicks. Perpetrated the criminally evil act of wishing and glorifying genocidal death on innocent defenseless Palestinian women, children and harmless civilians. This was done based entirely on erroneous information in the slave bible. Resulting in a sliver of pretend credibility the blog had now damaged beyond repair. This is the result of enabling the massive lies told by John and GP. People have become disgusted by this conduit of false instruction calling itself a blog from which nothing positive ever arises. A group of political pimps who are stuck in a cocoon of hallucinations. They never read or bother to properly research Afrikan history. But trying to trap everyone in that mental state of misery for company. This happens simply because damaged minds project themselves as the 'conservative' slave minded. Who always look up to corrupt politicians for answers unable to think for themselves. Therefore, knowing who they really are is never uppermost in warped minds. Since convincing themselves, it is not needed, but viciously attack those interested in learning their true identities. This is the result of twisted psyche's refusal to innerstand what is happening in the real world.

Arab Slavers & A Well-Established Slave Route

There will be no reverse slave trade engineered by "Black Skin, White Mask" – collaborators in the West Indies and their newfound slave masters to gorge and aggrandize themselves off ours and our ascendants' misery; and who will now witness the permanent upending of their wannabe bajan slaver manual. Black tools on two legs always on the look out for any angle to self-enrich, and the occasion to pretend they are elite nobility, way above their station in life, no matter whom their fantasies and delusions destroy. Could it be their slave trader madness to be at the top of the pile has gotten out of hand. Since according to credible sources, they are allegedly a card-carrying member of the Club of Rome? An even better reason to sever all politicians completely out of conscious Afrikan lives. Thereby making a prime example of generational traitors, as they have become distinct liabilities on all fronts and to everyone. During a recent on-air discussion, a name surfaced that is synonymous with Afrikan Kingdoms and still used in Guyana. The Kingdom of Ta'Mery a name from ancient Afrika in existence because Kushite and Nubian Kings established their presence in Latin America. World maps placed in correct order show South American borders running along a well-used slave route out of Afrika. And looked to me like both continents back up against each other, separated by water. A reversible journey, if allowed. No one is coming to save you. You have to save yourself from the imminent dangers of slave traders/politicians and their perilous antics. This truism applies right across the Caribbean Americas and the Afrikan continent. Once politicians and lawyers remain on the loose.

Guyana, Venezuela & the War that Never Was

An anomalous geo-political situation spilled over into the Caribbean region between Guyana and Venezuela over a centuries old contentious 1899 territorial boundary rights. Borders allegedly removed by at least four other countries, including Spain and the United Kingdom. None of whom owned the land, then or now. They remain the administrators of policies for many centuries. This happened during times when people were seen as property and liberties taken without the express permission of indigenous/aboriginal natives. Including Afrikans who remain the original owners of those lands as patrimony.

This recent sequence of circumstances occurred as a new distraction related to the emergence of oil and gas wealth, grabbing the media's attention. Massive available riches never shared with populations of Afrikans by either country in the Indo-Latino Americas Caricom basin. Countries carrying the mindsets and nauseous philosophies of Argentina as it relates to the existence of Afrikan descended populations who, in these modern times, are misused as warm bodies and numbers to generate personal wealth and riches for politicians and thieving lawyers. Extracurricular ambitions outside of taxpayer paid job descriptions by election seekers; a self-serving position taking center stage while their electorates suffer. A fluid scenario of a border dispute attracting increased soft sabre rattling from the locally elected. While catering to an admixture of diabolical, duplicitous, and hidden agendas from the usual self-absorbed political suspects.

There are many blacks among us who unashamedly carry the terrible curse of betrayal passed down by traitor ancestors. We are still fighting to rid the earth of such stains that traps us in an anti-Afrikan dimension resembling a twilight zone. It is all due to the narrow interests of the unconscious. Who are only interested in the falsity of celebrity. And many available ways to control people who are not deep thinkers. With the fame attached to their label as "useful idiots." There are advantages associated with stealing billions of dollars from the people. Who do not stand a chance of fighting back to reclaim.

The Guyanese president put on quite a public show, at the behest of the Barbados Prime Minister. He mouthed off at and demanded reparations from the UK and Europe for chattel slavery. That has nothing to do with him or Afrika, for that matter. But were also recruited to interfere, and ended up with the job of distributing any educational reparations program prepared by Europe in the future. Although Afrika knowingly owes us reparations too and should actively interact with us directly to reconnect to the continent and our bloodline tribes to begin the process. But obviously too busy jumping on the bajan PM's trillion-dollar train to nowhere to be bothered taking care of Afrikan ascendants. Yet, only one month later, in camera, Guyana desperately begged for help from the UK and Europe to keep the real or imagined threat from Venezuela at bay. All of this happened against the glaring lights of decades of terrible anti-Afrikan violence. And alleged extrajudicial killings of Afrikan men and boys. Including the brutal assassination of the Pan-Afrikanist Dr. Walter Rodney decades ago, as Guyana already confessed. These numerous alleged human rights violations are still under investigation. The same problems are associated with the Dominican Republic. Along with accusations of the alleged lynching of Haitian men. And mistreatment of Haitian women and children for the last half-century. With no protests, rage, or condemnation against either country for their anti-Afrikan stance against the populations. No attempt at ending these terrible abuses or diplomatic complaints came from the untrustworthy Caricom troupe. We are appalled. So imagine the outrage at the gall of the treacherous parties involved. Who brazenly planned for our future without our input.

The full force of betrayal was employed to misshape and further destroy the lives of our future generations, led by Muttley and all the other fairweather politicians who have gone before and are loyal only when it is vote begging time, to dish out their corned beef, rum and biscuit politics to the more intellectually vulnerable, hardcore yardfowls and miseducated supporters. Barbados could have allowed the Dominican Republic and Argentina to get into the reparations act too, since Guyana is no different, and the utter crazy of attaching Venezuela to our reparations claim when they, like the others, never included Afrikan populations in any of their oil and gas wealth, shows an extremely high level of self-hatred spewing from the bajan strategist.

The politically and civilly disrespectful never shared our history. Did not consult with, or gave us any proper notice via referendum on their determination to seek reparations on behalf of those of us, like myself. Who are genetically connected to three or more continents as Afrikans and living ascendants of long gone and present-day rulers. Therefore, I take this personally. The criminally deceitful misleaders kept the information to themselves for decades, claiming ownership for what is not theirs, and waited for any opportunity to monetize their fraud. While misusing, abusing that knowledge and pretending we do not exist during our decades of negative and traumatizing experiences of evil racism and apartheid politicians keep in play against populations for personal monetary gain, especially leading up to 2024.

Rhythms of Conflict

There is a potential for rhythms, and rumblings of conflict in the latest operation from less than honorable politicians in the boundary affair. Venezuela recently deployed armed forces to their borders. As currently playing out in disturbing cases of bloodletting in other areas of the globe. But due to the lopsided balance of Guyana with a small defense force. And Venezuela with an up-to-date and well-equipped army. The reason Guyana was forced to ask for outside help. After gleefully carrying out Muttley's dirty, backfiring work.

Guyana, Venezuela & the War that Never Was

Unfortunately for the unscrupulous serial liars and land grab scam generators. Not everyone is willing or easily lured into webs of deceit and sleight of hand. According to Nation News Barbados: Brazil refused an invitation to participate in an obvious coordination of drama. Geared toward satisfying a world stage addiction and land obsession fetish. This is seen by those who know these actors well. As resorting to every available gimmick to shine an international spotlight of attention on themselves and distract everyone from reality:

"Brazil President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, considered the most powerful leader in South America, was also invited to mediate the meeting between Ali and Maduro, but media outlets reported yesterday that he had turned down that invitation. They indicated that da Silva encouraged the Venezuela leader to be part of the dialogue, saying it was important to avoid unilateral measures that could escalate the situation."

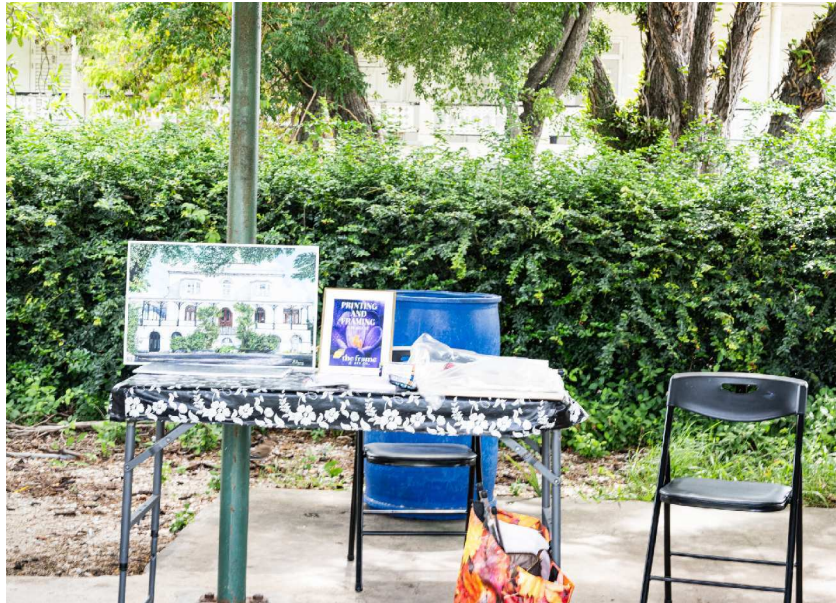

The corroded, overused, worn-out bayan template of playing both sides against the middle. Against a backdrop of manipulating familial and other connections in both countries, cannot be ignored. And are a guaranteed win, win regardless of outcomes or fallout. Especially when it can be seen they are the one who dizzily, and greedily set the whole thing up to play out as it did. In the politician's perversion and freedom with temporary capacity to orchestrate and direct. That is the main reason the reparations scam had to be taken into context. And recognized for the weapon it has become. The unannounced instant removal from the hands and mouths of politicians was the only recourse. Guyana's political executive are in no way connected to Afrikans by blood. But nevertheless, deputized to bellow lustily for what is none of their business. After leveraging our claims and delegating to negotiate and narrate to Europe on our behalf. Without our advice. There was no notice of the outsourcing of our repair process. While having absolutely no power to do so as mere politicians. With the chattel slavery reparatory justice, used as part of the visionless plan to cement the unfolding Guyana/Venezuela confusion.

Guyana, Venezuela & the War that Never Was

There was a widely circulated online podcast out of Guyana. The people voiced their concerns and displeasure about future problems associated with such alliances. The spokespersons for the group, who articulately and forcefully demanded the putrid manipulative, political stench and stains of oppression, dishonesty, and exploitation from smaller islands stay out of Guyana.

As I voiced on-air when the story was brought to my attention. Why there is any contention surrounding the boundaries is a mystery. After further research into the history of the 1899 border interference in line marks between the two countries. It was revealed that neither Guyana nor Venezuela are responsible for the actions of others 180 years ago. To shape and distort, giving rise to conflict. When looked at logically - it was discovered that those actions left the field wide open for sharing and camaraderie in this era, as unintended consequences rather than chaos and rumors of hostility.

There is more than enough valuable resources, including oil and gas in approximately 99,000 miles of land, two-thirds of the country, to go around, given the small population size of Guyana, of less than one million people. With approximately 150 thousand indigenous domiciled around the contestable areas; and whose opinions neither government asked before the referendum. While Venezuela's population size is approximately 28 million. It is a no-brainer, by any standards, to cooperate with each other in the spirit of righting past wrongs. This should be a process with open clarity, and not seen through the lens of greed and magician's con. There should be no problem giving a much stronger voice to the real owners of those assets - the people. This would effectively cut out the two small island set-up artists, the "mimic men" in the middle. Who must now both be held accountable for their dangerous games and friendships.

There is absolutely no need for pretend peacemakers with their eyes on the prize. Abusing the situation to raise their public profile while benefitting the most from both fiscal transactions steeped in legalese. While trying to sneak through the backdoor of the United Nations. To perch themselves in the Secretary General's chair to achieve complete immunity, for which they are famously unqualified. In the money, land-hungry and fame-coveting style of lawyers, trying their small island best to outshine current world events.

Guyana, Venezuela & the War that Never Was

As every day passes, everything becomes abundantly clear. There is no need for the power-hungry who depend on each other for trade and commerce. To be role-playing a war that will never happen. Since they are both still under administration, as are all the others. The idea to copycat what is happening in other hot-bed locales and adopt it for this area is a nonstarter. Such recklessness will destroy the region's reputation as a zone of peace. This is happening because of the politicians and their usual triple down bad faith agendas. And guaranteed to always result in some form of human rights violating corruption on full display. A real recipe is now added for creating mutually assured destruction in these turbulent times.

Since the recent comedic outburst from the presidents. There has been an attempt at open dialog with softer tones coming from the two South American countries. Although the narrative is still loaded with testosterone-fueled bravado. The optics, with the Prime Minister of Barbados allegedly sitting next to the President of Venezuela during the St. Vincent meeting, as a bloodline descent of Venezuela. The effluvium of manipulation was overbearing to some people. The Guyanese population would do well to vigorously defend and protect themselves from the life and freedom-threatening sophistry of the Bajan Monster and the Grenadine Beast and do not become distracted. Both allegedly, with evidence, descended from slave traders. The recent desperation for world-wide recognition was a tell, they still have not gotten over themselves and their slaver secrets.

The Diplomatic Pouch

The diplomatic passport and pouch features very heavily and extensively as a wonderful, useful get out of jail card. The people closely affiliated with governments depend on the cover to carry out nefarious crimes. This is par for the course in any alleged instances of drug trafficking and money laundering. This is a practice on the island for upwards of fifty years. Where no one is arrested. Both items come in handy. This was never a secret.

The world finally sees Barbados for what it really represents. A sitting MP and speaker of the house, was arrested in the last year or two on an alleged rape charge. While two of his family members were recently arrested on alleged drug trafficking charges. The island has hit rock bottom. The first incident reportedly happened in early December. The latter, within the last days of 2023 involving a suitcase of drugs and a diplomatic passport in the hands of a twenty-four year old person: which made the news. The untouchables get a dose of their own medicine. There has never been a better time to shut down the diplomatic franchise in the Caribbean from further horrific abuse. Playing the celebrity card does not make the story any less nauseous.

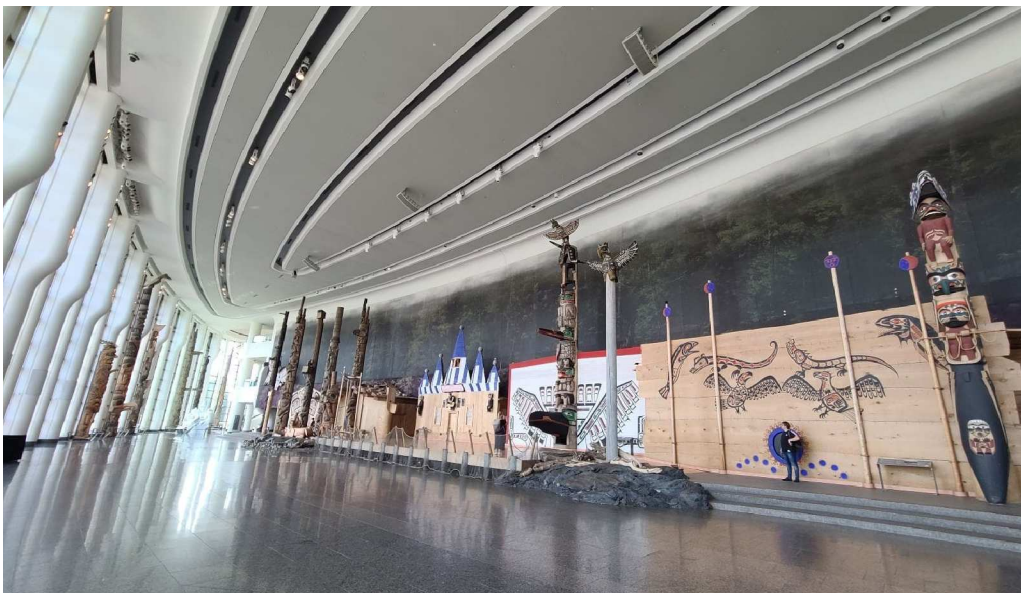

Chauvinistic Bajan Blowhards

While the well known flimflam artists of the Caribbean's political swamp were busy carrying out their latest tricks. A voluntary supporting cast of an opportunistic, ragtag, hand-to-mouth GoFundMe brigade of wannabe Wagner types jumped into the fray. The two then courageously took the wrong side. And talked through their nether regions of gathering a two-man army to fight for land in the Guyana/Venezuela imbroglio. Whose ownership they have no clue but egging each other on nonsensically. This was a direct result of mouths disconnected from brains, and the silly work of two dangerous security risks. Who gloriously and effectively solidified their place on-air for all to hear. It mattered not to them that they lack the crucial intelligence, details, and knowledge needed to navigate any leadership roles. Simply because neither of them like to read. And therefore are unable to do anything other than walk into well scripted traps. Then simultaneously trying to piggyback on the learned approach of others under the guise of Shooting the Breeze. The only moving target two braggarts can only dream of hitting, as the weakest links, and on-air show-offs.

The crew engaged in high drama, without invitation or any idea of the history or facts surrounding the Guyana/Venezuela disagreement. But nevertheless, hot and sweaty to jump at the chance to insert themselves for added comic relief. The two publicly and loudly asserted the wild intent on a UK radio station, no less. All of it in their imaginations but had the courage to speak it out loud. A truly embarrassing moment that people hope sees an apology issued to their weekly audience. For the unnecessary and misleading missives coming from a pair of bandwagon jumpers who have to eat the now popular dishes of crow and humble pie.

This charade of epic proportions left the brain-dead two-man army completely mired in dust. To pick up the pieces of their shattered to smithereens, overblown egos. Whom no one conscripted, but eager to join the Barbados government in the latest sham. This fanciful play-acting caused raised eyebrows. These weird, inexplicable actions caused the mad hatters to become fair game. They became the recipients of a world of punishing, raucous laughter and life-long embarrassment as the butt of endless jokes. All of it escalated due to the disaster of failed showboating, and one-upmanship. Which included the attempted upstaging of the Afrikan woman. This happened only because of the debilitating disability of short memory syndrome where the presenter completely forgot that I too am part of media. All forgotten in his insipid arrogance to talk down to women. The question remains, who were they really trying to impress or fool with that show.

Indigenous Sculptures, Museum Gatineau, Quebec

Chauvinistic Bajan Blowhards

Not unlike the diplomatic bajan dummy who allegedly violently confronted a female state lawmaker in NYC, squabbling over a plate of food, he paid no taxes on, while playing to the gallery his immunity and sparked a reaction showcasing the antisocial, less than a real man behavior and thought he could get away with adding more social decline to the USA. These types of non-progressive males should face isolation and not unleashed on present and future generations of growing males. To cause the absorption of their backward influence. Since the attitudes they carry toward women are very similar in scope.

People have expressed concern over the disrespect shown on-air to women. Including to seniors like myself, by the ill-mannered and unprofessional host. Who acts out as though he is in a cowardly competition with women. Surrounding our world views, advice, and opinions, to which we are all entitled. But unfortunately, he thinks as host, women can be bullied into his low vibrational way of thinking.

While trying his dismissive best to undo over a decade of work. To bring knowledge and inner standing to the vast majority. He will certainly not get away with introducing his twisted know-nothing, refusal to learn anything new. Since that episode, the dude was asked for help with the rot in Barbados. He publicly refused, while claiming he was being disrespected by the person who asked. That is the main reason I had to tell the lost presenter: I do not need to be fixed or remade. Neither do I appreciate any dictatorial intrusion. Especially when it is coupled with trash talking behind the back of an elderly woman on-air. These comedians believe everything is a joke and will never be serious. This not only highlights lack of training but also an ugly deficit in etiquette. We must thank the two chauvinistic blowhards for showing their true selves. So everyone will know to stay away from them for genuine safety reasons.

A Proper Memorial & Burial Site for our Shackled and Chained Ancestors

Amidst all the jostling by various countries to get their sticky fingers and unclean hands on 4.9 trillion dollars, as see, in their nightly dreams, is a fundamental truth. This is happening without the ascendants knowing our true history. As earmarked by the unimaginably deluded who are eager to grab all that money in reparations for our ancestor's terror, torture, and misery; apparently by any means necessary. But it was brought to our attention that the Barbados government has no clue where our ancestors are buried. Neither are they trying to find out. We are regaled with one location at Newton Christ Church with an impersonal sign that says 'slave burial ground'. The ongoing crime scene that is the final resting place for our ancestors - has no plaque or mausoleum. There is no other decent memorial to celebrate the existence of the Afrikans who built the island. Without any pay. According to what some people say. Neglected unmarked ancestral graves are scattered and can be found all over the island, if you know where to look.

There was a structure recently built in Bridgetown. This build takes on all the physical appearances of two giant Flintstones Mobile covers, And we are told that they are supposed to signify the shackles our ancestors lived with on a daily basis. Yet there is nothing in place to commemorate our Afrikan ancestors' achievements under the very worse conditions and in remembrance. Here is a representation of a cobbled together scene. The gigantic shackles as a symbol of a decayed, broken and socio-economically destroyed society that is caged in place. An epic fail.

Wonderful Ethiopians of the Ancient Kushite Empire: Chapter V. Prehistoric Egypt, The Land of Wonders (cont'd)

Drusilla Dunjee Houston
1876-1941

2400 to 2000 B. C. was the beginning of the, Middle Kingdom. This period is represented by the rise of Thebes, with its magnificent temples and its introduction of mysteries. A new deity Amen-Ra, god of Thebes presides. It had been thought that Amen was not one of the gods of Egypt until this 11th Dynasty, but when the pyramids of the 5th and 6th Dynasties were opened Amen was there. The Pharaohs claimed to be literal and lineally descended from Amen-Ra. This was implicitly believed by their subjects. Let us seek to trace who Amen-Ra was. He was originally the god of Ethiopia. Amen-Ra was Kush, the son of Ham from whom the Kushites sprang. He was not one of the oldest deities of Egypt because he was preceded by the gods of the ages of Noah (Saturn) and Ham. About the time of the rise of Thebes his name from his worldwide conquests must have been entered into the cycle of gods; for Africans deified their dead kings. Undoubtedly descendants of the great Kush sat upon the throne of Egypt This is why his name and form appear in the 11th Dynasty and its line of kings assumed his name. His became the predominant shrine of Egypt and its enrichment became the chief object of the Pharaohs. Amen or Kush was recognized by Egypt as its chief god.

All the mummery of the world which tries to resolve the gods of old into anything else presents the height of folly. The ancients looked upon Zeus, Apollo and p. 78 [paragraph continues] Osiris as persons. Amen-Ra was the Zeus of Greece, that was why they said the gods banqueted with the Ethiopians. He was the Jupiter of Rome. Zeus was king of kings because he was chief ruler in Ethiopia and over the lesser kings in his wide domains stretching from India to farther Norway. Horus, Apollo, Belus and Nimrod his son, were recognized and worshipped by all Kushite colonies. In the sculptures the Negro types of Africa are the assistants at the festivals in Amen's honor. He, himself, was of the same ancestry. In the later chapters of the Egyptian ritual his name is in the language of the Negroes of Punt.

CHAPTER IV. (Reposted for the Occasion)

Wonderful Ethiopians of the Ancient Kushite Empire: The Amazing Civilization of Ethiopia

At the beginning of the historical period of Egypt most inhabitants of the earth were rude savages. In western Europe and northern Asia the half-human Neanderthal lived in eaves under overhanging ledges and fed upon the untamed products of the wild. Outside of Africa, we find over the earth the rude stone tools of the first barbaric inhabitants, that mark the evolution of these races, from savagery, through long stages of development to the civilized state. In Africa we found no evidences of this slow progress of man up from the barbaric state. The Soudan shows no evidence of a stone age. The African seems to have passed directly to the use of metals without intermediate steps.

for when the curtain of history was raised we find them in attendance upon man. With the same infinite patience, this race developed wild plants into tamed fruits and cereals. The Kushite was the only race that could have performed this service, for the other races in historic times despised agriculture. Nomadic races are fierce and impatient, they have a nature the opposite to habits that make for patient and perseverance, which are the steps to art and literature. Before the dawn of history Kushites were working in metals and they had perfected the tools with which we conquer the forces of nature today. Our masons tools are identical with those unearthed

Museum,
Gatineau,
Quebec

The Semitic and Japhetic races upon the more sterile lands of the east, and north, as nomadic shepherds, were slow to change to the more settled life, that developed naturally in the rich regions of Egypt and the Upper Nile. Without agriculture they could not advance to the handicraft stage. Going back only three thousand years we find these nations still very ignorant. Semites made no showings of culture until the rise of half barbarous Assyria, which copied its arts and sciences from Kushite p. 55m Chaldea. The Hebrews learned agriculture and building from the Hamitic race of Canaan. Some one civilized race of prehistoric times had tamed the domestic animals; in Egypt. Joly calls the three significant factors of progress in the life of man: the hearth, the altar and the forge. All three of these were given to the world by the African. The ancients said that Ethiopians first taught them the worship of the gods and sacrifice. The agricultural Ethiopian developed the idea of a settled hearth and home. He developed very early the art of smelting iron, which is found in the pyramids and gave knowledge of its manufacture to the world. Donnelly points out that in the thousands of years since the domestication of animals, the historic nations of our times have tamed one bird. In the light of these facts, is it helpful to our development, that that we blazen forth the boast that p. 56 from later races has come the sum total of civilization? Ancient Africans yoked the wild ox, tamed the cow, the horse and sheep. This is why animals play such an important part in the old Kushite mythology. Africans subdued the elephant as early as the Kushites of Asia. Ancient sculptures show the African lion tamed. These indefatigable men domesticated wheat, barley, oats, rye and rice, in fact all the staple plants of our civilization were fully developed so far back in the distant ages, that their wild species have disappeared. Think how helpless we would be today without them. Reclus declares, "We are indebted to the African for sorghum, dates, kaffir, coffee and the banana, also for the dog, cat, pig, ferret, ass and perhaps for the goat, sheep and ox.

The, unusual size and flavor of African fruits were not the result of accident but of labored perseverance and skill. Primeval man gave us the gift of language. Myers says, "Rich and copious languages were. upon the lips of the great peoples of antiquity, when they first appear in the morning light of history." This was of incalculable value to succeeding ages. They also gave us the alphabet. Baldwin affirms that the writings used by the peoples of the first ages of history were all derived from a common source. The Phoenicians said the art was invented by Taut. The primitive worship of the Ethiopians was pure. They worshipped one supreme being. Their rulers were priest-kings and at death were deified.

Latin America

The first African explorers, found the country covered with cattle parks, in which the natives kept thousands and tens of thousands of cattle of remarkable breeds, rare skill being shown in their handling. A botanist of the Smithsonian Institute recently traveled nine thousand miles through Africa, finding species from which valuable grasses, grains, forage, and fruit may be obtained. We are still reaping the fruits of the earlier zeal and genius that tamed the first plants. Ancient Ethiopians were wonderful agriculturalists. The melon and sweet potato produced there are far more delicious than ours. The races to which agriculture was not native present the spectacle today of crowding their populations into cities. p. 57 Ethiopians developed long staple cotton, millet, kaffir and Soudan grass.

As the ages ensued this extended itself in ancestor worship, which was original with the Kushite race. It flourishes on the African continent today. Ancestor worship spread over all the countries Which the Kushites conquered. Frobenius, the great anthropologist, says, "Ethiopia is an ancient classical land. In olden days its inhabitants were considered the most pious and oldest of mankind. In many quarters Meroe is thought to be indebted to primitive Egypt. From a standpoint of ethnology, we must unhesitatingly reject this supposition. The Nubians possessed an independent and individual religion in the earliest known times, the cult of which impressed the Egyptians, who gave an account of it to the, authors of old." (Voice of Africa. Vol. II p. 621) p. 58

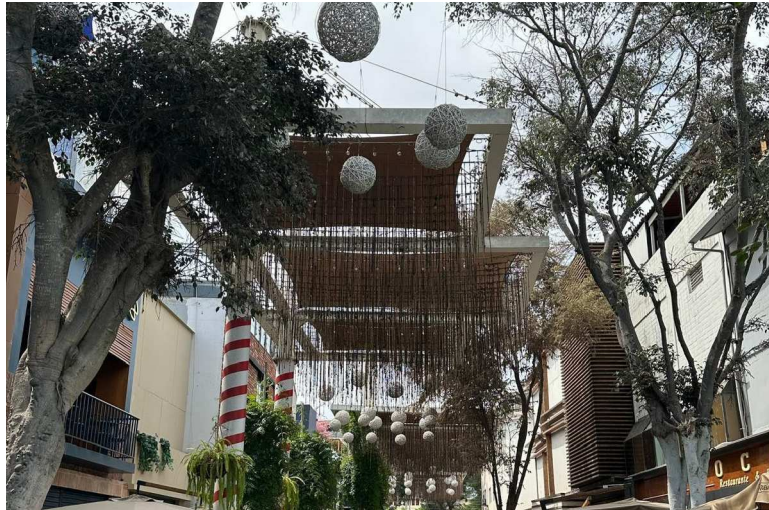

CHAPTER IV. (Reposted for the Occasion)

Wonderful Ethiopians of the Ancient Kushite Empire: The Amazing Civilization of Ethiopia

Champollion, the father of Egyptology, in his valuable memoirs declared, that the Lower Valley of the Nile was originally peopled from Abyssinia and Meroe. The most ancient cities that they founded were Thebes and Edfou. In the beginning Egypt was ruled by priest-kings, who reigned in the name of some deity. This sacerdotal class were overthrown by the warrior caste, whose chiefs raised themselves to the rank of kings. This new establishment of power took place about 2000 B. C. Thebes under them reached the height of her glory. The Old Race of the first dynasties, the race of Thot, Amen-Ra and Osiris had turned its greatest strength in wider and wider circles across North Africa and up the coast of western Europe.

This Nubian race did not come from Arabia. Their color, language and manner of life were different. According to their own traditions the Egyptians were originally savages without tillage or government. They lived in huts made of reeds. A race of different descent and color settled among them and lifted them to civilization. The men of this race were the ancestors of the Nubians, who planted other colonies in opposite regions of the world, in Greece, Colchis, Babylonia, and even India." All of these regions had priest-kings. There had been a rich literature in ancient Ethiopia, which endured until the time of Christ. There are now in existence more than two thousand Ethiopian manuscripts. The early Christian missionaries who entered Ethiopia considered it a duty to destroy all the ancient pagan literature.

To the eastward they had civilized the Mesopotamian plains and had swept on to India. Their relation toward Egypt became, more and more hostile, though full blooded Ethiopians still sat upon the throne. The idols of Egypt to the last detail were gods of Meroe. Heeren says, "The best informed travelers and the most accurate observers recognize the same color, features and mostly the same fashions and weapons in the inhabitants of the Upper Nile as they find portrayed on the Egyptian monuments. The race which we now discover in the Nubian, though by loss of liberty and religion much degenerated; yet, which was once the ruling race in Egypt.

The two thousand extant are but a remnant of olden writings, which if in the possession of the world today would unfold many a baffling mystery. The literature of Ethiopia that remains is almost wholly Christian. Nubia long resisted the inroads of foreigners. The Barabra knew what the entrance of aliens would mean to their land, but its confiscation and violence to their rights. Nubians mothers would drown or mutilate their daughters, that they could not carry away, to save them from dishonor. Virtue is highly prized among them today. Frobenius tells us that Nubians adopted Christianity as early as 500 A. D. Determinedly for a thousand years they refused to accept Mohammedism. When Islam began to persecute the Christians in Egypt, Nubia sent her cry, "Stay your hand,"

Their channels have been choked for years. Budge paints a pathetic picture of the few inhabitants who remain, who are nearly naked and slowly starve for months. They lack sufficient covering at night, the cold being intense. These Nubians get up long before dawn and sit shivering, waiting for the needed warmth of the sun. They love their independence and are content to endure hardship. 700 A. D. Moslem Arabs overran the Delta and transformed the old Retu type of Egyptian into an Arab speaking fellahin. Ferlini in 1820 found in the tomb of the Great Queen of Meroe, a bronze vessel, the handles of which were ornamented with Dionysus masks, also necklaces, bracelets, rings and other articles of jewelry. Dionysus was the Bacchus of the Greeks, the Osiris of Egypt and a very famous ruler of the ancient Kushite empire of Ethiopians. These jewels and the bronze jar are in the museum at Munich. Ferlini was greatly surprised at the workmanship, which he considered finer than any to which the Greeks had attained.

(Egyptian Soudan--Budge.) In 1863, Marriette discovered at Jebel Barkal p. 62 among the monuments, five columns of the highest importance, proving Ethiopia to have had a very important position among the Egyptian dynasties, in later historical times. These Ethiopian kings residing in Nubia ruled Egypt. One of these conquerors, Takarka carried his expeditions into Asia. He was doing no more than Ethiopians of earlier ages had done. European museums contain some of the monuments of Jebel Barkal. Groups of pyramids are near the temple. In twenty-five structures at Nuri in interior vaults is a method of support, until recently thought to be an Etruscan invention. At the time of the Old Empire the population of Upper Egypt was Nubian.

In the Sixth Dynasty Nubia was a part of the Egyptian Kingdom. In the inscriptions of Ethiopia the ruler is called "King of the Two Lands" and the symbol of the Uraei proves their authority over Egypt and Ethiopia. The pyramids of the Queens of Meroe show the authority of this line over the Two Lands. This was why Egyptian monarchs so often married princesses of Ethiopia. It seemed to strengthen their claim to the throne. Late excavations of Harvard University in old Ethiopia have unearthed at Napata a royal cemetery more than two thousand years old.

At Nuri they examined the tombs of twenty kings and twenty-five queens of Ethiopia from 660 B. C. to 250 B. C. The line of Candace was highly honored in Ethiopia. Their jewelry was very elaborate and purely Merotic in style and workmanship. At the feet of the Great Queen were the gods of p. 63 the north and south tying the two lands together.
